COLUMBUS, Jan. 4.—(UP)—A 1938 Ohio automobile license plate publicizing the Northwest Territory Celebration was authorized by Gov. Martin L. Davey today.

The governor also suggested distribution of a circular with the 1937 plates telling of plans for the celebration and the program of the Ohio State Commission, appointed to cooperate with a federal commission in work on the celebration.

MURPHY CALLS CONFAB

Automobile Union Leaders to Confer in Detroit

CLEVELAND, Jan. 4.—(UP)—Pickets at the vast strike-closed Fisher Body company plant clashed today with police.

Police Lieut. Peter Kekik was knocked down and mauled by a group of 75 men who sought to prevent Lincoln R. Scafe, plant manager, from entering the building.

The fighting started when police tried to clear a path for Scafe's automobile. Scafe charged pickets to overturn his car and that they "jumped" Lieut. Kekik when he tried to force his way through the crowd.

Use of Clubs Denied

No one was injured in the melee. Some pickets later charged that Lieut. Kekik and Sergeant Patrick McNeely had used their clubs. Official publicity men of the Automobile Workers of America denied this, as did the officers.

CAUCUS TO END HEATED CONTEST FOR HOUSE JOB

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—(UP)—The sharp battle over the house Democratic leadership reached a caucus showdown today with the outcome bound to effect President Roosevelt's control over the new congress.

The contest between two canny veterans of politics, John J. O'Connor, New York, and Sam Rayburn, Texas, overshadowed all other preliminaries to the opening of the 75th congress tomorrow. Republican house and senate caucuses, and the senate Democratic conference, are expected to be routine, perfecting party machinery for the new session.

The spirited fight for one of the choicest posts in congress involved the issues of White House "favoritism," sectionalism, Tammany and the personalities of the red headed New Yorker and the bald Texan. Whether wounds made in the long fight will be opened afresh or healed in the caucus was uncertain. Party leaders admitted they need complete harmony if the unruly Democratic house majority is to be kept for the administration.

According to Miss Sieler, who named three men as the "executioners," she and Harold Baker, the savior, were slugged, shot, and carried to an explosives store house and then she crawled to safety before Baker was blown to bits. Miss Sieler attributed the attacks to gangsters' fears she might "squawk" concerning a $37,000 jewelry store robbery in Sioux City, Ia. Police launched a wide search for the men.

TWO MEN TELL GROGER MISSING CHILD, 10, WELL

Martin Orders All Roads in Shelton Vicinity Closed to Traffic

G-MEN ACTIVE IN SEARCH

Raid on House Fails to Produce New Clues

SEATTLE, Jan. 4.—(UP)—Gov. Clarence Martin today personally directed a statewide man-hunt for two men who informed Dr. W. W. Mattson of Tacoma through an intermediary that his 10-year-old kidnapped son, Charles, was well.

G-men and state police stressed this "break" in the seven-day-old abduction following apparent failure of a sheriff's raid on a Seattle suburban home.

Sheriff William Sevryn of King county led a posse of deputies on the ramshackle house in the Lake Forest park district three miles north of the city after a neighborhood grocer reported he had heard a boy "about eight or 10 years old" crying there.

Two Men Found

The officers found two men in the house — Arthur Cooke and a companion who gave the name of Johnson. After questioning them for two hours in the house, the officers returned them to the county courthouse for further investigation.

"We are satisfied these men have no connection with the kidnappings," said Undersheriff Lewis Forbes, a member of the posse. "However, we can understand how Farmer (Robert Farmer the grocer) would have been suspicious of their actions."

Farmer said the two men frequently bought light breakfast food, such as might be fed a young boy, and that they seldom left the house.

"Cooke and Johnson explained the crying," Forbes said. "Farmer apparently mistook a voice from their automobile radio for the whimpering of a child, and they told us that they very seldom went out of the house. We thought this raid might lead us to something hot, but it proved another blind alley."

Roads Blocked

Today every available police patrol car, state highway patrolman and deputy sheriff were called out to blockade the maze of roads in the Shelton-Olympia-Tacoma district, which lies to the south of Seattle. The objects of their all-night vigil were the two men who stopped by the Reed sawmill camp north of Shelton last night and told E. R. Grubbe, gateman.

"Notify Dr. Mattson in person that all is well,"

Police and State Division of Motor Vehicles Reported from Olympia that two cars found abandoned in the vicinity of Shelton were being inspected for possible clues.

One of the cars, reportedly answering Grubbe's description, was found in Isabella valley, 13 miles west of Shelton. The other car bore a California license.

Gov. Martin, when informed that two men believed to represent the kidnapers were in the vicinity, went to the Olympia police station to direct co-ordination of the (Continued on Page Eight)

CRACK AVIATORS MAY COMPETE IN PARIS CONTEST

Hawks, Hughes, Merrill and Others May Vie For
$93,000 in Prizes

NAA APPROVAL SOUGHT

Safety to be Important Angle
in Race Next Summer

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—(UP)—The nation's crack pilots may compete against army and navy fliers in the New York-to-Paris non-stop air race commemorating the tenth anniversary of Charles A. Lindbergh's trail-blazing flight over the same route.

Both branches of the military flying service, it was understood, have made inquiries of the National Aeronautic Association concerning the contest for which the French government and other French aviation interests are offering $93,000 in prizes.

Many Interested
Among the American fliers who have indicated they are considering participating are Frank Hawks, Howard Hughes, Dick Merrill and Harry Richman. Many other inquiries have been received by the NAA.

Regulations governing the race were received from the French Aero club several weeks ago. Certain phases did not meet with NAA approval but the difficulties are being ironed out. NAA will direct the contest from this end. Regulations were withheld pending completion of negotiations, but it was learned that the race will not be one in which all the contestants will leave simultaneously. Fliers will be permitted to leave any time during a given period, probably some month during the summer. Elapsed time will determine the winner. There will be prizes for first, second and third and possibly other places.

Duplication Not Planned

Safety will be an important factor. Both the French and American aeronautical societies have agreed to limit entries to multi-motored airplanes with "full crews." No attempt will be made to duplicate Lindbergh's pioneer flight except in its non-stop feature.

The date has not been determined but it definitely will be in mid-summer, probably July. Lindbergh flew in May but trans-Atlantic aviation experts believe there is greater assurance of better weather in July and August.

Floyd Bennett airport, New York city's municipal field, will be the take-off point because it has the longest runways in the metropolitan area. It is less than 20 miles from Roosevelt field, Lindbergh's departure place. The Paris terminus will be Le Bourget where he landed.

VOICE ...of the... PEOPLE

LIVE AND HELP LIVE

"In a City the size of Cincinnati it seems unreasonable," (quoting Circleville Herald, Jan. 1, 1937). Yes, it may be to those who do not look into this as they are privileged. But would that I believe if the books were compared with other cities our size that we would not show up on the wrong side of the page. But to this subject there also seems to be two sides and here is the other side as I see it. "If veteran drunks knew," Yes, veteran drunks "get that," any administration inherits some of these ways. They do not change their appetites habits etc., with each new Mayor on the job and now with the Law permitting the sale of liquor, it is a very difficult problem to solve. The law says one "may fine" them but how does that work? Here is the answer today: We will take Mr. A. for example. He has some money at the week end and the first thing he does, he buys some groceries, some coal, pays little on rent and has left a few dollars left. On these two dollars he feels he's entitled to his recreation whatever he chooses and rightly so. He feels quite rich and gets with his friends, and having the money, they influence him to buy a bottle of liquor. After having a few drinks they begin feeling pretty good and his friends insist upon buying more liquor. By getting him to buy more liquor they get more, and of course, he gets too much for his good. Then he's deserted by his fair weather friends and turned loose on the streets with remitt that the Police Officer brings him in, to not only remove him as a nuisance from streets, but to protect him as well from weather, and sober him up. Then let's shift the picture to his home. What do we find there?

If the man is jailed they are at once without funds. No support, and go onto relief with added expense for the County. These folks as a rule have no reserve funds. It seems today that all of us will agree that the big problem is to keep everyone at work if possible. Now as to the Offender. What shall we do with him? The recent Herald article suggested that these drunks be fined. The law does say that one may fine them. But how does that work? The man has no money and if sentenced to pay a fine (which he cannot do) he is committed to the county jail to serve out this fine and costs. It's true what surplus money they have spent to get drunk. Then we get them after that!

Then shift the picture to the County Jail and what do we find there? He is furnished two good substantial meals per day, clean beds to sleep in, nice bath, quiet, plenty of company with whom to play cards read books and use the tobacco and cigarettes furnished by family and friends.

Our county jail is like all other county jails and these folks can assemble in the corridors, read the literature of the day, hold mock trials, sing, and amuse themselves in various ways. All at the expense of the County and the Tax Payers money.

As to "crazy drinking" it is not quite clear as to what is meant. Among the people of better circumstances there is drinking also. With what result? They take care of another. Protect them and take them home and very few of this class ever fall into the hands of the police. If they do, they post bonds for their appearance, fall to appear, forfeit their bond, thereby, and that ends the case. Dealing with the class of people who have not the money to pay fines, costs, etc. it has been my policy to be tolerant.

The State of Ohio licenses the sale of liquor in Circleville. Drinking places are licensed by the State of Ohio and have permits from the U. S. Government. So anyone can buy if he has even five cents. These stores can meet the demand of all people from one drink to gallons if they want it.

You may call it "crazy drinking" if you choose but this liquor is easily obtainable by anyone of age. And by making it so easy to obtain, we make it quite difficult for those with this habit, to resist. And no where is the public doing much to "break" up this "crazy drinking" than news to me. The Mayor is to enforce the law. I never get these folks until after they violate the law. God be praised that I still have a sense of humor. One thing we all need to remember and that is: When dealing with the Human Family, one is dealing with a very variable factor. There are no two

One of the essentials in making successful changes in farm management practices is to have accurate records of farm operations. County agricultural agents can

ACTOR'S GRIEF IS BLAMED FOR ACT OF SUICIDE

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 4.—(UP)—

Ross Alexander, youthful New York actor, emulated his first wife in a suicide after more than a year of grief over her death, was a coroner's informal report today.

His body was found Saturday in a hay mow on his ranch with a small bullet wound in the head a short while after he had left his second wife sitting at a cocktail table and asked her to call him "when dinner is ready."

The 29-year-old Brooklyn actor followed closely the suicide of his first wife, Aleta Freile, who left him after a cocktail and walked to her bedroom where she shot herself with the same small caliber gun he used. She quit a stage career to seek work in the movies and had been unsuccessful.

Alexander married Ann Nagel, also an actress, last September. She said he had grieved over the loss of his first wife.

Alexander starred with Francine Lawrence in "Let Us Be Gay," in one of his early successes on Broadway. Paramount signed him for movies in 1931 and later he played for Columbia and Warner Brothers. He played in "Midsummer Night's Dream," "Hot Money," "Captain Blood" and his last appearance was in "Ready, Willing and Able."

Tenants operated 28.9 per cent of all Ohio farms in 1935. The percentage of tenancy is highest in counties in the western half of the state. Fayette with 48.7 and Darke with 45.7 of tenant-operated farms led the list. Columbiana with 14.6 per cent of tenant farms was the lowest.

CHINA PARDONS GENERAL CHANG, NAMED KIDNAPER

Five Years' Loss of Civil

KAI-SHEK URGES ACTION

Nation's Leader Accepts Part of Blame

NANKING, China, Jan. 4.—(UP)—The government agreed today to pardon young General Chang Hsueh-Liang and thus relieve him of a 10-year prison sentence imposed for his seizure of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek in an effort to force war against Japan.

No mention was made, however, of remitting the sentence of five years' loss of civil rights also imposed on the young marshal.

The generalissimo was taken prisoner when he visited the marshal's city of Sian, capital of Shensi province, to learn why Chang was not pushing an anti-communist campaign more vigorously, as he had been ordered.

Forty-six of Chiang Kai-Shek's guards were slain and he was held prisoner 15 days before his release was negotiated, after which Chang Hsueh-Liang followed him back to Nanking and requested that he be punished for his part in the revolt.

The generalissimo told the state council that he was partly to blame for his own kidnapping because he had not maintained better discipline in the army, and he recommended that Marshal Chang be pardoned.

VATICAN MOVES TO END FALSE ILLNESS RUMORS

VATICAN CITY, Jan. 4.—(UP)—

A source usually found to be authoritative said today that the Vatican intended to issue this afternoon the first official communiqué on the pope's illness.

In the past such bulletins have been issued only when a pope was desperately ill. But on this occasion, it was believed that Prof. Amintore Milani, the Vatican physician, had persuaded the pope and Cardinal Pacelli, his secretary of state, to issue bulletins in order to stop circulation of false reports.

It was said that the pope spent a reasonably good night and that there was no appreciable change in his condition this morning. The pope received first Prof. Milani, then Cardinal Pacelli and next Cardinal Bisielli, prefect of the sacred congregation of seminaries and university. He discussed important church matters with the two cardinals. It was understood.

Last night the pope was disturbed by severe pains in his legs, swelled by varicose veins. It was said, but fell asleep early this morning. His sister, nephew and niece called at the Vatican late last night but did not see him.

FLORIDA WOMAN CONTINUES FIGHT AGAINST SHOLTZ

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla., Jan. 4.—(UP)—

Entrenched in the barricaded city hall which has been turned into an arsenal, Mrs. Irene Armstrong, Florida's only female mayor, today began a legal battle to maintain her administration in office.

Threats of bloodshed and civil war, which threatened last week when Gov. Dave Sholtz ordered four units of national guardsmen to oust Mrs. Armstrong and the city commission, was averted for the present as both sides turned to the courts for solution.

Attorneys for the mayor armed themselves with every scrap of available legal precedent to show Circuit Judge Herbert Frederick when they ask him to make permanent an injunction issued New Year's night to prevent appointees of the governor from taking office.

John S. Byington, state representative who sponsored the legislative act of 1933 makes Daytona Beach the only city in Florida over whose officials the governor has power of removal, joined Mrs. Armstrong's legal staff and worked to prevent her ouster.

TRACY AND BRUCE

Spencer Tracy and Virginia Bruce co-star in that stirring drama of the medical profession, "Men in White," in the Radio Theatre tonight. Produced by Cecil B. DeMille, the Pulitzer prize-winning play by Sidney Kingsley will be broadcast over the Columbia network at 9 p. m.

Several weeks ago the Radio Theatre scored one of its biggest hits with Paul Muni in "The Story of Louis Pasteur." That was a drama of medicine sixty years ago. "Men in White" is a drama of today.

The essential conflict in both plays is the same though phrased in different events. Both Louis Pasteur and George Ferguson fought the battle of those who believed something greater than money should motivate a doctor in the practice of his profession.

The young Dr. George Ferguson, the part to be played by Spencer Tracy, is in love with Laura Hobson. Laura doesn't think he should give up financial success even for a chance to work with the eminent Dr. Hochberg. Tied up with this conflict is Ferguson's affair with a nurse at the hospital.

Spencer Tracy, outstanding on the screen recently for his dramatic work in such pictures as "Fury," does his first complete radio play in this performance of Radio Theatre. Virginia Bruce also does her first Radio Theatre engagement on this date.

THINKERS ARE NEEDED

PRESIDENT HUTCHINS, of the University of Chicago, believes that American universities should drop the emphasis on vocational matters and seek to train students to think. Shop practice and kindred subjects, he insists, should be limited to junior colleges and vocational training schools.

There can be no doubt that the ability to think is sorely needed in the world today. Millions of supposedly civilized men have become the docile, uncritical subjects of dictatorial regimes. They have lost their freedom and independence because of an inability or unwillingness to come to grips with the basic problems of political and social life.

One might reasonably expect the higher institutions of learning to provide thoughtful leaders capable of pointing the way to improved conditions and inspiring all citizens with the desire to be something besides personified rubber stamps.

Even though one may disagree with President Hutchins' repudiation of vocational courses in the most advanced institutions, he yet may concede that a university has fallen short of its most worthy goal if it has failed to develop eagerly and expectantly at its ivy-covered door.

A LOSING GAME

A NATION which had been shocked and alarmed by the frequency of kidnappings finally was reassured by the deadly effectiveness with which the Federal Bureau of Investigation, often in cooperation with local and State police, solved these crimes and dealt with the criminals.

With all of the kidnappers of recent years, except one, either executed or imprisoned, there was basis for the hope that this heartless and vicious crime would not in the future be known in the criminal annals of the country. Unhappily, that hope is not to be fulfilled.

The kidnaping of ten-year-old Charles Mattson, of Tacoma, Washington, does not differ insofar as heartless cruelty is concerned from the many similar crimes that have preceded it. There is some measure of comfort, however, in the knowledge that these criminals invariably fail.

Ultimately, there is reason to believe, this boy will be returned to his family and the kidnaper who carried him away will be compelled to face stern justice.

FDR TO TACKLE EASIER ISSUES

WASHINGTON — The President's strategy for this session of Congress is simple but canny.

He will first go to bat on the least controversial issues; then, his hand strengthened by the momentum and prestige gained from anticipated decisive victories on these questions, he will swing into those where the going will be heavy.

The nation is overwhelmingly for peace, for keeping aloof from Europe's boiling cauldron of war. Also the Supreme Court ruled in its decision upholding the 1935 Neutrality Act that under the Constitution the President has far-reaching powers in dealing with foreign affairs.

So, taking advantage of favorable public sentiment, the Court's pronouncement and the explosive Spanish situation, the President will start the legislative ball rolling by pressing for a new neutrality law giving him extensive discretionary powers to impose embargoes.

He tried to get such a bill through in 1935 and again last year. But congressional hostility, particularly in the Senate, was too powerful for him.

The legislators balked at giving the executive discretionary scope in so dangerous a problem. They insisted that the ban on shipments of arms and munitions to belligerents be made mandatory. And they had their way — despite strenuous objections from Roosevelt and furious undercurrent lobbying by the State Department.

There is now a willingness to give the President a certain amount of discretion over commodities. Such as foodstuffs. This concession is an important gain for Roosevelt, who will use it to try to get complete discretionary power.

RELIEF

Next on his program are the deficiency relief appropriation and wage and hour legislation.

These subjects will come up in separate bills, but they will be tied together as inter-related problems. Congress will be told that there can be no hope of a solution of unemployment as long as employers are free to pay sweat-shop wages and work labor for sweat-shop hours.

On the surface the President will appear to be trying to hold down the deficiency grant to around $500,000,000. But he will not be too insistent on that figure. If the liberals can boost it to the $750,000,000, they demand, he will accept the increase.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Once the stronghold of conservative Republicans, the powerful Senate Finance Committee is left with only one avowed member of the party, Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas, a moderate liberal. The other non-Democratic member on the Committee is Wisconsin's Progressive Bob La Follette.

Some Structures of Body We Can Do Without

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

THE QUESTION arises what structures in the human body we could do without, and which would cause direct and instantaneous death. There are whole tracts of this framework that we can get along without. I have referred already to the appendix and the tonsils and adenoids.

So far as digestion is concerned, we can do without the entire stomach. There are plenty of people who have had almost the entire stomach removed, and while we cannot be sure, because removal of the stomach presents considerable operative difficulties, there is no reason to suppose that we can't do without the entire organ.

There is only one catch to this, which is that the stomach apparently secretes a substance which stimulates blood formation, and it is possible that in the course of time the stomachless person would become anemic, but if so, this is easy enough to supply by the use of liver extract or stomach wall (ventriculin).

We can do without a large part out all of it. As much as four-fifths of the liver can be destroyed without interfering with the smooth functioning of the body. There are enough cells left to carry on all of this function. If the entire liver is removed, however, death occurs within a very short time.

Mann, of the Mayo clinic, has perfected a technique for the removal of the liver in animals and has studied the effect. The animal invariably dies within 24 to 36 hours. The principal symptoms are those of reduced blood sugar, and when the animal gets almost moribund, it can be revived by injecting sugar into the blood stream. This can be done three or four times, but there finally develops a different set of symptoms and no further response is possible.

The spleen is another large organ which looks as if it had important functions to perform but, as a matter of fact, the entire spleen can be removed without producing any noticeable effect upon the functions of the body. The function usually ascribed to the spleen is destruction of red blood cells, but there are several small accessory spleens in the body which perform this function or else, after removal of the spleen, the liver takes it over.

Certain little structures, however, such as the parathyroid glands or the adrenal glands, no bigger than the end of your thumb, cannot be removed without immediate bad results and eventual

CHAPTER 40

IT WAS A sultry hot night, with thunder about, and the old Abbey had never seemed more desolate or grim.

Selden heard voices in the corridor, echoing faintly in ghostly whispers from the stone walls. James was going round the house with Hucks, showing him the way about. Selden waited till they had passed the door of the library, and followed stealthily. He quietly opened the door and went in, using a torch for light. Not a sound greeted his ear, and Sylvia had evidently gone with her charges, as arranged, into the room behind the organ.

He went thoughtfully into the study, which had been kept locked ever since the day after the murder, and dust lay thick on the furniture and carpet. There is always something gruesome about a dead man's room. His small articles lying about, tobacco jar and old pipes, laid down each in its chosen place. Selden had taken stock of the room when he had been there with Hutchins for his brief examination. The single silver candlestick looked oddly lopsided.

Selden took his seat at the desk, and gave himself up to plying the occurrences of the night of the murder together.

What had taken place in this room? He was quite convinced that the affair started from here. Sir Henry had come here from his bedroom—the bloodhounds had revealed that—and had apparently been here for some time. With whom?

Then Mrs. Thornton had met James coming back from this part of the house, who had told her that Lady Severing had rung the bell—there was some lying here. For some reason Sir Henry had gone down to the chapel—and here again the use of the silver candlestick indicated that he had gone from his room, and in haste. But if the evidence at his disposal were accurate, the murder of Sir Henry synchronized with an attempt on the twins.

Selden's face assumed a graver aspect. If that were so, then how could anyone hope to get the children away without the certainty that they would cry out and Miss Lawrence be roused?

Selden gazed idly at the telephone on the desk before him. Subconsciously something came back to his memory—James had in this very room suggested telephoning, and had gone to the hall to do so. It was curious to say the least, and Selden took the receiver off the hook and waited. Presently a voice came through. "Who's there?"

"Is that you, James?"

"Yes, Mr. Selden. Did you require anything?"

"My telephone goes to your room, then?" Selden asked.

"Yes—it was Sir Henry's private phone to me."

"I didn't know—I thought it was the public phone," Selden told him, and replaced the instrument.

So this was the bell ringing in the night! Sir Henry had summoned James on that fatal night for some reason.

Things began to take definite shape in the detective's mind.

Three days of tense anxiety succeeded. Everyone at the Abbey had the same feeling that things were coming to a crisis. Even the weather intensified the impression, for after the storm had succeeded a period of hot damp days, with lowering black masses of cloud that hung in a rainless sky, and seemed to threaten at any moment to discharge their pent-up forces. The very atmosphere was clammy and oppressive, while a thin evil mist lay over the lake, like the ghost of a dead man in a seance.

Mrs. Thornton had returned from her visit to London, and faced and inscrutable as ever. She and Hucks had snatched up a sort of queer friendship, for when he called for his nightly vigil he generally drifted to the housekeeper's room, preferring her company to that of James. The twins were fretting at their enforced confinement, and already showed signs that much more of this would in health, though they had the free run of the library, which James had locked up.

To Reid, the waiting time was intolerable. The doctor had sternly warned him that if he attempted to get up without permission it would be his duty to inform Lady Severing of the true nature of his injuries. His own weakness told him that patience was necessary, and the fact that Selden was watching over events reassured him.

Food was brought from the Abbey, each day James visited him, and when he was unable to come one of the maids was sent.

Darkness had fallen—a sultry impenetrable darkness that might be felt. Reid had put on a dressing gown and gone down to his sitting room, where he lay on the couch. He felt restless and uneasy, and intensely lonely. The entire absence of news was disquieting.

A very gentle knock came at the door, so quiet that he hardly heard it. If the night had not been so deadly still he would have imagined that it was merely the wind. It was repeated a little louder, and he called wearily, "Come in." The door opened and shut in the gloom, and he could just make out the form of a maid carrying a basket, and remembered that he was hungry.

"Put it down there, please," he said, and the girl moved to the table, placing her basket carefully down. "Thank you. I shall be able to unpack it."

For some reason the girl fidgeted with the things, and Reid became impatient. She left the table and came over to his couch, throwing a shawl from her head, and even in the darkness he knew her.

"Sylvia!" he cried in a sudden revulsion of feeling.

"Hush! I'm going to lock the door."

He could hardly realize that it was really a living being, and not one of the phantasies that had haunted him. Sylvia came back, and sat on the edge of the couch.

"How are you?" she asked.

"However did you get here?"

"James arranged it for me."

"James? But are you and the children all right?" He was puzzled, and his mind was clouded.

"You mustn't get excited," she said, a cool hand on his temples.

"I've had a course of nursing and know all about illness."

"But where have you been hiding?"

"One thing at a time," she laughed. "I've heard all about you, and your attempt to get back to the Abbey because I put a light in the window."

"You were in danger," he said simply, "and I, like a fool, had allowed myself to be trapped in the Colonel's house."

She grew grave at last. "I didn't know, but I guessed somehow that was the reason. When you did not return, and James had been waiting up for you, I became anxious, rather naturally, since you had sent the car back without any explanation."

"The cunning dog. He told me he had sent a message," Reid muttered.

"I put the light in the window, thinking it might bring you back. It was really more for your sake than any actual danger, though James seemed strangely disturbed. I am sure he knows more than he will say. Anyhow, he persuaded us that we ought to move from our rooms, and hide for the time being."

"But where? The whole place has been thoroughly searched."

"It was really very simple," Sylvia said with a laugh. "James took us into the library, where a fire was still smouldering, and fetched in bedding. The children rather enjoyed the fun—it was like camping out to them. They are very quick and mentally overdeveloped, but they know they are in some danger, and rather like it."

"But surely," Reid said in a puzzled tone, "the library! Colonel Graham and the detective went in there."

"Of course. James showed them over the whole place, but you see, when they came in, we weren't there."

"Are you joking?" His mind was confused with fever and he could not grasp her meaning.

Sylvia leant forward and spoke low. "There is a passage from the library leading to the organ loft. None of us ever suspected it, but James used it when he went to the organ, and Sir Henry had shown it to him. He says that before the library was built it was just a door, and a staircase, but then the builders made the door into a panel in the library wall at the end as it suited the room better. James took us in there, and made us comfortable while they were in the library. You see, he only has a key and no one else ever goes there."

"But you can't stay there, and isn't it dangerous your coming here?"

"One thing at a time, and if you will let go of my hand I'll give you a cup of tea."

Reid turned scarlet in the darkness, and released the cool hand he had been holding in his hot one, while Sylvia went into the shadow and lit the oil stove, speaking quietly while the kettle boiled.

Lovely Hands, Soft and Warm, Add Much to Womanly Charm

By GLADYS GLAD

"America's Most Famous Beauty" MANY a beautiful woman has unattractive hands. Sometimes it is the only flaw in her appearance. When this happens no one blames her for concealing them whenever possible—wearing gloves when she can, hiding them in her lap when it is impossible to wear gloves.

I don't blame any woman for wishing to conceal her hands if they are unattractive, for hands do count a great deal in the beauty picture. And hands that are always damp, moist and clammy are just as unattractive as hands that are harsh, rough and unshapely. You'd be surprised at the number of women who complain of possessing moist, perspiring hands, too. Such a condition naturally detracts from a woman's attractiveness. But instead of grieving over the fact, she should spend her time in correcting the condition.

Treatments Help

Damp, moist hands are anything but a pleasure to possess, and often prove a source of embarrassment to their owner. They are unpleasant to touch, and can really prove a handicap to a girl, no matter how shapely, smooth or white they are. Sticky, perspiring hands are usually found on persons of a very sensitive or nervous type. They sometimes indicate partial or complete nervous exhaustion, and in properly treating them the first step should be the correction of any nervous disorders, the building up of good physical health.

home of Mrs. William Lemley, of Walnut street, Thursday, Jan. 7. A covered dish dinner will be served at noon.

Turkey Dinner

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Stoer, near Pherson, entertained 25 guests at a turkey dinner at their home, Sunday. Those present to enjoy the bountiful dinner were Mr. and

Kay Francis
Blessed with lovely hands

However, there are superficial treatments that help somewhat in correcting excessive perspiration of the hands. One very satisfactory mixture for this purpose can be made up of two drams of boric acid, three drams of borax, three drams of salicylic acid, three ounces of glycerine and three ounces of bay rum. And another equally effective solution can be made of two drams of tannic acid, one ounce of glycerine, three ounces of rosewater and two ounces of toilet alcohol.

Either of these two solutions can be used on the hands with perfect safety if correctly applied. Don't use them haphazardly if you wish to obtain satisfactory results. These solutions merely help to correct the excessive perspiration in the palms of the hands, but do not cause the destruction of the sweat glands. They act in the capacity of perspiration deterrents, and help to keep the hands dry, cool and fresh.

Before using either of these solutions, the hands should be thoroughly cleansed with a pure, bland soap and tepid water, and rinsed. Then they should be sponged with whichever of these solutions is preferred. This should be done three times a day. After the sponging, the chosen solution should be permitted to dry on the hands. Then massage with a good rich skin balm or hand lotion. In order to keep the skin soft and white. This procedure will not only help to correct the overactivity of the perspiratory glands, but will also help to keep the hands cool, smooth and velvety in texture.

well-filled baskets and a covered dish dinner was served at 2 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. Griffey were presented several attractive gifts.

Six of their children, Mrs. Harley Armentrout, Mrs. Ray Leonard, of Columbus, Mrs. Samuel Frazier, and Chester Griffey, Ashville, Mrs. McClelland Clark, and Mrs. Ray Holcomb, of Circleville, were present.

PURDUE AND INDIANA FAVORED AS BIG TEN CAGE CAMPAIGN STARTS

ACROSS THE COURT

By WALTER JOHNS

Central Press Sports Writer

POT-SHOTS—Real name of Mike McMichael, Northwestern's ace forward, is Marcellus III. There are few who can equal his ability at faking a guard out of position. . . . Ninety per cent of Pittsburgh cagers the last 10 years have come within five or ten miles of the university. . . . Each Pittsburgh basketball player gets a pint of ice cream at each practice and after the game. . . . Franklin Cappon, Michigan floor coach, stresses the importance of the rebound to his players.

University of Nebraska's Corn Huskers have more ambidextrous players than we've seen for some time. The Huskers toss them in with either hand. . . . J. Craig Ruby, for 12 years coach at University of Illinois, is now in the insurance business in Kansas City, Mo. . . . Doug Mills, Illinois star of the past, is doing okay with the Illini. . . . Frank Smith, Penn State's varsity football end and co-captain of the Nittany quint, already has won seven letters. . . . Bob Kessler, Purdue great, is playing with the Muncie, Ind., All-Stars pro team.

Now Let's Dance

Dancing after cage cards is becoming more popular and helps draw in the young folks. . . . Bucknell had the best season in seven years on the court in 1932. . . . Al Severance, who became new basketball coach at Villanova this season, had an undefeated freshman team last year. . . . Now that Ohio State is through with the California trip, it goes across the country to New York City for a game with New York U. before opening its Big Ten schedule.

Carideo Cage Mentor

Enough of that. On to a bit about your old friend, Frank Carideo. The one time all-American quarterback at Notre Dame, who went on to the University of Missouri as head football coach and then had to quit because he couldn't find a winner, is in his second season as head basketball coach at Mississippi State.

Frank also serves as assistant football coach and did a swell job during the past season. In basketball, Frank is a comparative newcomer, but he has the fire to make a successful mentor.

His team has a pretty tough schedule this year, too. It includes games with Florida, Georgia, Duke, L. S. U., Loyola, Mississippi, Tulane, Alabama and one trip north to Philadelphia and Washington, D. C.

Basketball in the south, according to the ex-Notre Damer, is increasing in popularity.

About This And That In Many Sports

Tigers Face Busy Week

Now about certain of the ability of his various cagers, Coach Jack Landrum was to start drilling his high school athletes this evening with a busy week-end in the offing. . . . Friday evening, Bexley comes here to help pry off the Central Buckeye league lid. . . . Saturday evening, the Tigers go to Ashville to meet their most natural foe. . . . Both games promise to be humdingers. . . .

Both Squads Fast

Bexley has been playing pretty fair ball, but has not been invincible. . . . If the Tigers work hard this week they have a good chance to hang one on Carlton Smith's court quintet. . . . Al Kauber's Ashvilleites have been doing pretty well, dropping only one game, that to Scioto's fast combination. . . . The Ashville team is built around Walter Gregg and Wimpy Walden, forward and center, while several other members of the squad are good shots, bearing watching. . . .

Scioto at Atlanta

The county schedule this week included: Salt Creek at New Holland, Washington at Deercreek, Ashville at Walnut, Muhlenberg at Pickaway, Scioto at Perry, and Monroe at Darby. . . . All games are contested on Friday. . . . Scioto will experience a real test when it meets the Atlanta boys Friday evening on the Perry township court. . . . This band-box has proven a deep mystery to nearly all teams this year. . . . Scioto is unbeaten so far, and a victory would assure it The Herald cup for having the best standing during the season. . . . The girls' race for the second cup is heated with no team now undefeated, Darby having bumped Pickaway out of the select class the week before Christmas. . . .

Owens on Wrong Ticket

Bill Braucher says: Jesse Owens is accepting loss of the Sullivan memorial trophy philosophically, and with a wry bit of racial drollery. . . . The Negro athlete who gave one of the greatest Olympic performances in the history of sport, says merely, "I guess the less said about those things the better". . . . after all Jesse needn't be offended because he lost the outstanding amateur award of 1936 by a vote of 1,106 to 1,013. . . . Governor Hughes wasn't offended because the solid south voted for Woodrow Wilson. . . . Governor Landon wasn't offended because the same perennially Democratic precincts polled for Roosevelt. . . . Jesse was just on the wrong ticket!

DOG MISTAKEN FOR LION

PASADENA, Cal. (UP)—A frantic call to the police department from a woman that an escaped lion was at large brought all of the activities of the former into action. . . . After getting confirmatory testimony from other witnesses the beast was tracked down, in a cemetery, captured and turned over to the pound master. It was a rather awe-stricken Saint Bernard dog.

VINES FAVORED TO BEAT PERRY IN GARDEN MEET

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—(UP)—Ellsworth Vines was established an 8 to 5 favorite today to defeat Fred Perry in the latter's debut as a professional tennis player at Madison Square Garden Wednesday night.

The garden is virtually sold out of seats which were scaled from $1.10 to $9.90 and one of the promoters, Francis T. Hunter, said the "standing room only" sign would be out the night of the match. . . . More than 17,000 are expected to pay more than $40,000 to see the duel, surpassing by far the record tennis pro gate of $30,800 set by Vines and Big Bill Tilden two years ago.

FLOR FROM COTTONSEED

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UP)—A Texas mill has produced a bread and pastry flour from cottonseed, reports the All-South Development Council. The flour contains 50 per cent protein and has shortening properties and nutritive elements.

There is a scientific method of learning about public opinion, but it's cheaper to spend an hour in a beauty parlor.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

A QUESTION OF TIMING

THE QUESTION of timing often is the most delicate operation relating to efficient play of the hand by declarer or defender. Today we have a deal which beautifully illustrates the subject.

♠ 8 5 3
♥ 7 6 2
♦ J 5 4
♣ J 2

♠ A K Q
♥ A 10 5
♦ K Q 10 8

♠ J 9 2
♥ K Q J 4
♦ None
♣ K 10 9 7 6 3

The contract is 5-Diamonds, with East the declarer. The opening lead is the K of hearts. As one heart trick must be given South the first trick is won with declarer's Ace, and the suit is led back, so that dummy may ruff a third round of hearts. South's J wins the trick. Unless South takes out the Ace of clubs immediately East's contract can readily be fulfilled. The K of clubs is led and dummy is in with the Ace at the third trick, giving East a 10-card problem in practical play. Dummy is to lead. Declarer is to win 9 of the remaining tricks. In actual play the problem was made simpler by the fact that South had overcalled East's opening diamond bid, with clubs. Then North's double of the final contract marked him with holding the missing trump strength.

To fulfill the contract the 9 of diamonds must be led at the fourth trick. As may readily be discovered, North cannot gain by doing anything except play low. Covering with the J obviously will be nonsense, as that will leave declarer with every high trump except the Ace. Putting up the Ace will do no good, as no return lead will bother East. Dummy can still ruff a heart and declarer can still lead through North's J-X-X of trumps, to pick them up, if anything except a trump is led. If a trump is led it will only make declarer's work simpler.

Having won the first trump lead in dummy, lead a low spade. Have dummy ruff his last heart in dummy. Lead the last trump in dummy. North can make only his Ace of diamonds. The J-X may be picked up with declarer's K-Q, leaving all cards in declarer's hand good. The above play shows correct timing of a trump through North, with a fulfilled contract as reward.

Unless the trump is led through North at the fourth trick, the contract will go down a trick, as declarer must lose two trump tricks through improper timing. Try it, by having dummy lead a spade, instead of a trump at the fourth trick. Declarer may then ruff his losing heart at the fifth trick, but he now must lose two trump tricks. Lead a trump from dummy at the sixth trick. North will now play his Ace, having left the J-X-X, which declarer cannot pick up, as he has no means of again entering dummy.

HIGHWAY DEPARTMENT TO LET $106,000 IMPROVEMENT PROJECT TUESDAY

FOR MILES OF ROUTE 22 TO BE BUILT IN 1937

More Than Four Months' Time to be Required For Big Construction Task

HEARING SET FOR JAN. 12

State to Relocate Part of CCC Thoroughfare

The state highway department will receive bids up to noon Tuesday for improvement of four miles of Route 22 in Perry township between Williamsport and New Holland. Estimated cost of the improvement is $106,800.90.

The road to be resurfaced has been the scene of numerous auto accidents in recent months. It will be resurfaced with natural asphalt, will be graded, drainage structures built, with roadside improvement included.

This project is expected to require 135 working days. Workers are to be obtained from the National Re-Employment office. Wage rates are 75 cents an hour for skilled workers, 60 for intermediate and 50 cents for unskilled.

A public hearing will be held in the courthouse Jan. 12 at 2 p. m. by the state highway department to hear objections to the proposed relocation of the CCC highway in the northwest part of Pickaway county.

Nearly two miles of the highway would be changed under the plan. Interested landowners are Etta Johnson, Leonard Zimmer, C. W. and Rebecca Turner, J. H. McKinley, the Harrisburg Merchants and Farmers bank and H. B. Chenoweth.

CALIFORNIA OIL OUTPUT CURBED

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—In an effort to conserve California's oil resources, for home use and national defense purposes, the 18 major oil producing companies of California have voluntarily accepted the principle of production control.

As a result of the decision, it is estimated that the state's oil resources, which at the present rate of production would be exhausted within the next 15 years, can be made to extend over a period of 21 years or more.

In the plans for production and sale which have been accepted by these major companies virtually all exportation is eliminated. It was conceded that foreign shipments from the Pacific coast, which in the past have gone largely to Japan, China, Australia, and New Zealand already have fallen off to a large extent as the result of production in the East Indies and other Oriental regions. No effort will be made to recapture these markets.

In addition, shipment of California oil to the eastern seaboard, either for domestic consumption or export, will not be encouraged, for the reason that is not considered justifiable to exhaust the local resources in an effort to compete with the cheaper pipe line and transportation facilities of the Oklahoma and Texas fields.

When the invalidation of the NRA eliminated all enforced restriction, California producers immediately engaged in unlimited competition that showed quickly that only two results would follow. The first was the speedy exhaustion of the state's oil resources and second the lowering of prices by over-production.

The latest scientific estimates of California's oil fields place their maximum productivity at 8,000,000 barrels. To date 4,673,000,000 barrels have been extracted, or approximately 58 per cent of all the oil resources.

Auto Strike Leader

THIS close-up of Homer Martin, general president of the United Automobile Workers of America, was snapped in Cleveland shortly before Martin and other union officials went to Flint, Mich., where a general meeting of union leaders mapped plans for continuance of the campaign against General Motors. Meanwhile, the strikes at body and parts-making units of General Motors continued. Martin's headquarters are in Detroit.

DIAMOND MINES TO BOOM AGAIN

KIMBERLEY, South Africa (UP)—The diamond industry has recovered two-thirds of the ground it had lost since the boom year, 1932, and Kimberley looks for the return of its most prosperous days.

Sales during 1936 are expected to total $40,000,000 when final figures are available.

Sales in 1932 reached $60,000,000. From that figure they slumped to $7,500,000 in 1933. There was a recovery to $20,000,000 in 1934, but only as the result of complete closing down by the big South African producers. During 1935, mines gradually were reopened, and sales for that year totalled $31,250,000. Now every mine in the Kimberley district is open except one, the Jagersfontein, which produces blue-white stones, and it is announced that work will be resumed there soon.

The improvement in sales is reflected in the price of diamond shares, some of which have risen spectacularly, and still are rising. Shareholders who had seen their holdings reach the lowest level for all times are now recovering their losses.

The principal destinations of the stones in normal times are the United States, Great Britain and India. The last-named country has largely increased its purchases in recent years, re-investing in diamonds a great deal of the proceeds of its discarded gold.

Great Britain will claim the attention of the diamond market in 1937 when big business is expected to develop as a result of the Coronation. The United States also has increased its purchases, both the important diamond centers of Antwerp and Amsterdam reporting larger business with the United States.

(Continued from Page One.) present neutrality law the president is authorized to proclaim an embargo if and when he finds that a state of war exists between any two or more countries.

Officials, studying the rapidly growing breach between the German government and the loyalist government of Spain, believed that German within the next two or three days may furnish the legal peg on which President Roosevelt can hang an embargo on the shipment of arms, ammunition and implements of war to all factions in the Spanish civil war.

The United States has desired for some time to institute an embargo but the present neutrality law makes no provisions for its application to civil war.

PACIFIC AIRLINE TO SERVE MORE

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—With completion of its first year of trans-Pacific service, Pan American Airways today is weighing basic economics of the project on which $5,200,000 has been expended, and for which pilots and ground crews have risked their lives and undergone hardships since 1931.

The record is being written in red ink at present but airline officials are far from being disheartened. Heavy losses at first were foreseen. Returns thus far have fallen far short of paying operating expenses, not to mention returns on capital invested, although passenger and freight traffic have been at virtually full capacity since inception of each.

To Pare Expenses
Thus PAA officials today are trimming expenses, planning increases in carrying capacity for passengers and freight, as indicated by orders for 40-seat flying boats under construction in Seattle.

At present clipper ships carry only six passengers on the 2400-mile hop between Alameda and Honolulu, and 12 from Honolulu to Manila. Demonstrating the thoroughness with which Pan American has gone over its plans, airline officials point out a 10-mile headwind (which the Clippers often encounter) although without danger cost PAA an extra 800 gallons of gasoline and six hours of flying time.

The three Clippers in service, China, Philippine and Hawaiian, have in PAA's first year of operation, flown 541,200 miles in actual trans-oceanic crossings, far above the entire total of individual ocean-spanning fliers during the past decade.

Costly Bases Built
Sixty-six one-way crossings had been completed at the end of the first year's operations, five complete crews trained and in service, approximately 250 pounds of air freight carried on each trip from the Alameda terminal and $2,500,000 expended alone in establishment of island bases.

Many times the number of passengers would have flown had PAA been able to take care of all applicants, and it is this fact that has led the airline to place orders for a half-dozen flying boats half again as large as the Clippers in use and of several times the "payload" capacity.

Every road leading to Shelton was closed.

TACOMA, Wash., Jan. 4.—(UP) Dr. William W. Mattson, father of kidnapped Charles Mattson, obviously was heartened today when he received the message two men sent through E. R. Grubbe, Shelton sawmill gateman, that "all is well."

He declined to discuss the statewide manhunt for the two men. "I don't want anything to get out that would hurt our chances of getting Charles back alive," the distraught father, red-eyed from lack of sleep, said.

"There will be no news until we get Charles back. "The only thing we can do is keep our heads and remain calm." Last night Tacoma churches offered special prayers for the youth's safe return.
